

Global Public Policy

Positions are available in: Americas and Europe

BlackRock's Global Public Policy Group \(GPPG\) supports the creation of regulatory regimes that increase financial market transparency, protect investors, and facilitate responsible growth of capital markets, while preserving consumer choice and properly balancing benefits versus implementation costs.

Our team is known for:

- The work of the team is diverse in subject matter, and highly collaborative in nature. Focus topics are wide-ranging, rooted in global megatrends, current affairs, and regulatory issues.
- Current priorities include retirement frameworks in the context of population aging; sustainable investing rules that support the transition to a low-carbon economy; geopolitical challenges and energy security; financial inclusion; corporate governance and shareholders rights; financial stability and market infrastructure; digital assets; long-term investment – to name just a few.
- The GPPG team evaluates and develops recommendations on public policy topics; writes the ViewPoints series of papers; responds to public consultations launched by regulatory authorities; and submits letters to policymakers.

Our team partners with:

- Internally: country management, and the corporate communications, marketing, legal and compliance, distribution, product, investment and risk management, investment stewardship, and sustainable investing teams.

What will you do as an analyst?

- Monitor developments in US or EMEA financial regulation, particularly as it relates to the asset management industry.
- Assist in preparation of speaking remarks, presentation materials, and briefing memos for meetings with policy makers, clients, and trade organizations.
- Write content for and support production of white papers and comment letters to regulators.
- Create and distribute materials for recurring meetings, including monthly meetings of the Public Policy Steering Committee, a group of senior executives across the firm who advise on and share information about public policy issues impacting various businesses.
- Update and maintain the BlackRock Public Policy website.
- Partner closely with groups across BlackRock, including Legal & Compliance and Corporate Communications.
- Serve as a BlackRock representative on conference calls, events with trade organizations, conferences, and other relevant events; relay key insights to the team.

What capabilities are we looking for?

- Interest in financial services regulation and current affairs.
- Ability to clearly articulate complex ideas, both in writing and verbally.
- Ability to perform under high-pressure situations and tight deadlines.
- Excellent organizational and project management skills, with attention to detail and focus on completing tasks.
- Strong problem-solving, analytical, and research skills.
- Strategic and creative thinking aptitude.
- Good judgment and impeccable ethics; desire to succeed in a demanding, innovative, and entrepreneurial environment.
- Proficiency in Microsoft office programs, i.e. PowerPoint & Excel